Students should become creators – TNAU VC told to the Students

Inauguration of 105th student's club of Tamil Nadu Agricultural University, Coimbatore has been done today at the premises of the university.

Dr.Kowsalya Nathan, Special Consultant (Life style and Anti-Aging) Apollo Hospital, Chennai is participated as chief guest and inaugurated the student's club. Mr.T. Sankar, Club Secretary welcome the gathering and introducing new office bearers of student's club. Dr.S. Mahimai Raja, Dean (Agri) Tamil Nadu Agricultural University while felicitating the gathering told that every year Tamil Nadu Agricultural University produces thousands of agricultural scientist to cater the need of the farming community and also help the nation to achieve the food security. So the students of this university should feel proud to being studying here and act responsibly. Moreover, students were provided wide range of opportunity to hone their soft skills through various forums by the student club.

Addressing the gathering Dr. K. Ramasamy, Tamil Nadu Agricultural University Vice Chancellor said that students should use their potential and become a creators. Student should learn to use their leisure time more effectively and efficiently engaged through constructive activities. Student's club is give platform for that. Students may involve themselves in club activities by creative and innovative way.

In her special address, Dr Kowsalya Nathan, reiterated the importance learning from everything. Observation, preservation and determination is the key to the success.

Academic part of life will come systematically to the students but students should take initiatives themselves to develop their passion towards their dream career by instilling various skills and characters with them. For this, participating various cultural, sports and other club activities are essential. As an Agricultural Students, should start “ Eco Club” which is timely need one and agricultural students should act as role model and torch bearer for society.

Dr. C.R. Ananthakumar, Registrar, University officers and students were attended the programme.

As a part of the program, two magazine “Pozhil and Tatler” prepared by the students released by the Dr Kowsalya Nathan and the same was received by the Vice Chancellor.
